RICHMOND GARDENS

JAMES S. FRELIGH, PROP.

1596 EAST 118 STREET

CLEVELAND, OHIO

LOOKING FORWARD TO 1938

With our notes still in mind we are looking forward to the varieties we expect to grow the coming season. But first let us look into the hobby of growing glads. Bigger and better glads are grown today. Its true they are not being brought out by the same hybridizers but nevertheless they are superior one way or another. Take the new apple Cortland. This variety was cross pollinated about 25 years ago, yet we are just now seeing the fruits in our markets. The new varieties of glads from the Pfitzers are really the work of the elder Pfitzer now gone, yet his work was so important that only now have crosses produced Maid of Orleans and others that have followed. But back of all this was a hobby which gave health and happiness. You too can have that joy if you act now. Start with some of the newer lower priced kinds. That greater pleasure than going out into the garden each morning to greet some new face.

To have healthy stock the soil should be well drained. Its not necessary to have sandy soil. If your garden does happen to be of the brick variety then spade in early, well leached coal ashes together with well rotted manure, woods earth humus or anything that will improve its texture. Do not apply lime before or after planting as this may cause scab. Some of our customers tell us that by changing their soil conditions, they increased the height of some of their glads from 28-30 inches to well over fifty inches.

Time and time again some one wins at the shows with one of the older varieties just by sheer ability alone, by growing that variety to perfection. By developing that ability in your garden you are sure to work wonders on some of the new and taller creations, and to be a winner is only another of the many joys that come to the glad grower.

Just to show the kind of spirit that exists among glad fans, I recall a case at the National show at Pittsburg. A first prize had been placed on a spike of Red Phipps belonging to a boy of about 11 yrs. It was found that this was in error and so the ribbon was placed on another spike of Red Phipps. The boy watched this procedure and then exclaimed, "That's all right I will beat him next year."

One way to get started with some of these newer and higher priced varieties is by purchasing bulblets. While we do not guarantee these to grow, some do bloom the first year when conditions are right. Special ir will be furnished with your order if so requested. If there are any other growing problems we will be glad to assist where possible.

If you run a road side stand we can select sets of 25 each of six colors or twelve colors in sets for cutting.

Growing over 200 varieties there are always some that may be temporarily out of our list to increase stocks. If you don't see what you want listed, write us we may be able to supply.

As growers of Gladiolus we believe there are too many new introductions coming on the market. It will be our policy as in the past to handle only the better of these varieties.

James S. Freligh.
